

♥ RED FLAGS YOU SHOULD NOT IGNORE ♥

We've all done it: fallen for someone and later, when our hearts were broken, looked back, slapped our heads and said, "I should have paid attention when I noticed this one little thing..." Here are 8 of those things you should never ignore.

1

He spends more time on his mobile device than he does connecting with you. If he's really into you, he will put his toys away and put his attention on you.

He can't have an evening out without a drink, be sexual without a drink, hang out with friends without a drink, or relax without a drink. You never get to see who he really is.

3

He is frequently late. If he respects you and your time, he will plan his own time so that he doesn't leave you waiting around for him. Traffic is only an excuse once.

If he can't manage his finances, he still has some growing up to do. Anyone who is broke, living with their parents, or needs your help isn't ready for a relationship.

5

Everyone needs a balance of work, rest, family, socializing, and personal interests. If he spends too much time or energy on any of these, he won't have any left for you.

His place is a mess. Or fastidiously neat. Our surroundings are a mirror of our inner world. If he's a slob, or obsessively neat, this says something about hidden parts of his personality.

Internet porn? Most people occasionally indulge. But if he's always looking, beware. Porn addiction is an increasingly common problem. It's difficult to diagnose and recovery is long.

He has no friends. Even introverts have friends. If he's a loner, don't let other charming and attractive qualities fool you. This may indicate serious issues lurking below the surface.
